Farmers Markets

Farmers market in my town which allows for the support of local farmers and for buyers to get cheaper and fresher food. The Farmers Market also takes donations to support those experiencing food insecurity. It supports everyone throughout the community.

Public Movie Showings

A sharable commodity through the Belmont Rec department (which I work for). That sets up a movie night every friday at the local park. It is free entry and started during covid to give the community a movie theater community feel without the cost.

I have been to this before and must say it effectively brings the community together.

Little Free Library

Down the street from my house there is one of these and it is always filled with books. The idea is that you take a book, give a book. Allowing readers to broaden their horizons and not have to purchase books or deal with the pressures that come from a library. It's completely free and if people want they can build or buy one and put it in their yard.

Belmont Garden Club

Belmont Garden Club is as it sounds, it's a garden that a group of people pay, plant and take care of plants together. Although this is a community garden of sorts the price and cliqueness of the club can make it intimidating or hard for others to join.

There have been attempts at fully public community gardens like the one outside of one of my old elementary schools but it fell short after a few years. Not enough people really committed to keeping it well kept which led to the garden becoming an overgrowth of weeds. I do think if done properly a community garden could very successful in Belmont.
