

Living on the edge:

Maine

Made by Roman Brown

Cliffside Overlook

...On the edge, Maine stretches out in every direction. The forest oversees into ocean. The view makes the climb worth it, reminding me how small I am against the views.

Quiet Shoreline

Not all of Maine is rugged cliffs. Just around the bend, the ocean softens into calm beaches and hidden coves. It's a place to breathe, reflect, and relax.

Thunder Hole

Each wave crashes with a roar, filling the air with salt spray and excitement. Thunder Hole is alive and unpredictable.

Iron Rungs on the Rock Wall

The Beehive Trail isn't just a hike, it's an adventure.
where every step feels like a leap of faith.

Looking Down

Looking down from the cliffs, it's equal parts beauty and danger. The steep drop reminds me that the outdoors can be both thrilling and humbling at the same time.
